Further, it is now far from being well settled, though as was said in some remurks upon the recent letter of Judge Black, the tendency of the decisions of the highest courts has recently been toward

For in-during their official terms. Officers of the stance, it is common to hear the assertion that the passenger rates charged on our rail-ways are excessively and unnecessarily high, promises to entirely root out the practice of this although many of the roads, especially in the west, have endeavored to meet the public demand by a considerable reduction in their rates, so that from two to three cents per mile is now about the average, excepting on remote or southern lines. It should not be forgotten, owever, that passenger force in this country Even on the railways running from London through a dense y populated suburban region, aret class fares are often much higher than on western railways ranning along stretches of uninhabited wilderness. For instance, on the London and Folkestone the fares average over three pence (six conts) per mile, first class, and over two pince (four cents) per mile, sec-ond class. Even from London to contiguous suburban noints the fares on this read are far similar service; for instance, from Cannon street and Blac sheath, 5% miles, the first class fare is 1s. 2d. (28 cents); to Woolwich, 1s. 4d. (32 cents); and to Ohiselburst, 8 to miles, 2s. (48 cents). Even on the Midland road, which rates, the charge is 1%d, (S conts) per mile for first class. If these charges are fair on old and wealthy railways running through the most densely peopled partion of Great Britain, six railways in the vest and thinly peopled west is not unresconable. Cortainly, as long as railways in strictly governed England, where anything looking towards extertion or oppression by corporations is summarily punished, are not charging these intry in compelling roads, far less favorably ituated, to accept even lower rate:

THE LIFE-SAVING SERVICE, The life-swing service which involves great requires greater experience and cooler conrage in a single instance have they shown cowardied Hanco is due the splandid results of their work. When shipwrecked people are taken ashore by these patrolmen they have no sholter other than the little life stations can afford, and this The government has made provision for bring-the shipweeked ashore, not for keeping them alive when they got thore. It is the usual thing after a hard day's fight with the breakers for the surfacen to surrender the slender cheer of their little station houses to the people they they can. The service should be better paid and better provided for its every way, and congress should do it at this session. In striking contrast with our neglect of this service is the care and rewards which the English bestow upon the men who guard their shores. There it is a charitable work, supported and magnificently supported, by individual subscription. In one month recently, gold and silver medals, other prizes and more than $10,000 in money were given to lifeboat crows in one month.

The Ohio State Journal, a paper which takes a good deal of pride in Ohio statesmen, touches up the factions in the republican party thus: We expect, of course, that President Gardeld will gologuize the Grant men, the Blaine men, the Sherman men, the Conkling men, the Cameron men, and every other man's men. But we'expeet, also, that, when he comes to make up his ewels, he will not forget the Garneld aren, for really they are the men who elected birn and saved the country from the profils of democrat ic rule. Entirely too much importance is at-tached to the real or protonical quartels and bickerings of public men. Full mineteen-(wontieth) of the republican values of the country-care nothing about the leaders of alleged factions, and would be satisfed eather than disple seed should be president neglect all of such leaders. Gen. Garfield, though in the truest sense an eminent party leader, has rever been a factionist.
